

17 September 1975

NOTE FOR GENERAL WILSON

THROUGH:

In the opinion of , and myself, the enclosed is not worth the time and effort involved. It is extremely difficult to read and comprehend. This proposed methodology ignores some of the extremely important elements involved in the outcome of a war: morale, quality and resourcefulness of commanders, the cause being fought for, etc. If you want a simple "thank you" type of response, no problem, one is enclosed. Anything beyond that would, in our opinion, be giving it better treatment than it deserves.

P. S. I suspect that anyone analyzing the Revolutionary War using this methodology, without knowing the actual outcome, would decide that there was no way that we could be celebrating our 200th anniversary this year.